Dr. Andia Azimi joins Sam Houston State University

Dr. Andia M. Azimi is an assistant professor in the Department of Criminal Justice and Criminology at Sam Houston State University. Dr. Azimi joined the faculty at Sam Houston State University in 2018 after completing her M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in Criminal Justice at Georgia State University. Her research centers around victimization, with a focus on children and adolescents. She is especially interested in victimization that occurs early in life and examining the role social support plays in ameliorating or preventing negative outcomes associated with victimization. Her research also focuses on violent victimization that occurs on college campuses or among college students. Her scholarly work has been published in peer-reviewed journals, including the Journal of Interpersonal Violence, Deviant Behavior, Drug and Alcohol Review, Violence and Victims, and the Journal of School Violence. In addition to her scholarly research, Dr. Azimi has taught undergraduate courses on ethics in criminal justice and corrections. We are excited to welcome her to SHSU and the CVI-affiliated faculty team.

Crime Victims’ Institute Agency Partnership Updates

The Crime Victims’ Institute has recently established multiple partnerships with municipal police agencies. One existing direction the Institute is pursuing has been the facilitation of victim-centered responses by criminal justice agencies.

One partnership involves assisting survivors of domestic violence by examining risk factors for predicting repeat domestic violence incidents. Our agency partner has developed and implemented a screening tool administered by responding officers during domestic violence calls for service that do not end in arrest. Incorporating these assessments as routine practice in the police response to domestic calls for service has the potential to identify those individuals at high risk for repeat victimization. Doing so will improve service delivery and intervention efforts. In addition, data collected will inform future law enforcement responses to calls for service made from the same location, which ultimately should improve police investigation of domestic incidents. These endeavors will produce translational research that may be used to benefit other municipal police agencies across the state of Texas.

This is the second project in recent years in which the Institute has collaborated with a Law Enforcement agency. CVI is delighted to extend the impact of the Crime Victims’ Institute by working closely with criminal justice agencies.

Focus On:

Brittany Acquaviva
CVI Graduate Research Assistant

Brittany will begin the Ph.D. program in criminal justice in the Department of Criminal Justice and Criminology at Sam Houston State University in the Fall of 2018.

In May of 2016, she earned a Bachelor’s of Science in Criminal Justice Sciences, with a minor in Psychology from Illinois State University. In May 2018, she graduated with a Master of Science degree in Criminal Justice Sciences from Illinois State University. Her Master’s thesis explored the perceptions of sexual assault that Illinois State University students embodied.

To gain more holistic knowledge pertaining to the criminal justice system, Brittany worked as a legal and medical advocate for sexual assault and domestic violence survivors while completing her graduate program. Brittany also spent time observing juveniles with problematic sexual behaviors at their court mandated treatment counseling sessions. She is passionate about advocating for those most vulnerable. Her broad research interests include sexual assault, sex offenders, and human trafficking.

Brittany will be joining the research team that is evaluating a mandatory sexual and family violence training for law enforcement—a grant awarded by the Office of Violence Against Women.
